

From steute Schaltgeräte to steute Technologies

With effect from 01.10.2018, steute Schaltgeräte GmbH & Co. KG now has a new company name: steute Technologies GmbH & Co. KG. This marks our advancement from a manufacturer of switchgear to a provider of sensor networks and intelligent MMI solutions for complex applications in the industrial and medical fields.

In practice, this step was taken some time ago. Managing Director Marc Stanesby: "We have increasingly been developing system solutions for our customers – such as wireless intralogistics networks for E-Kanban systems or network-compatible controls for medical equipment in the OR. Now we are simply driving this process further."

The established core business, namely the development and production of high-quality switchgear and sensors, will of course continue at steute. However, the products developed by the four steute business units Automation, Extreme, Meditec and Wireless are now frequently components within complete technology platforms, for example the control of production processes, as well as the operation of machines or medical devices. These platforms are also developed and produced by steute. The new company name steute Technologies will make this change in our business model transparent.
